Scott Jordan Named National Rural Teacher of the Year

St. Bonaventure University graduate Scott Jordan, a science teacher at Cuba-Rushford Central School in Cuba, N.Y., has been named Monsanto Fund National Rural Teacher of the Year by the National Rural Education Association.

Jordan has been the architect of a comprehensive wildlife education program at Cuba-Rushford that has included the building and operation of a fish hatchery on school grounds, construction of a log cabin education center, and construction of a deer enclosure adjacent to the school. His students edit their own television show, CRCS Outdoors, which airs on the Pursuit Channel.

Jordan earned a Master of Science in education from St. Bonaventure in 1997.
